Helping Haiti

Smith College Campus School fourth-graders had just finished a geography segment on Central America including the Caribbean when the earthquake in Haiti occurred. Their teacher, Lara Ramsey, said that when the students heard about the earthquake, they felt a connection to Haiti as more than just a place on a map. The painting of the West Indies they created to raffle off brought in $1,110 for Partners In Heath, which provides assistance in Haiti. In the top photo, Campus School fourth-graders finish work on the class painting. Bottom left, fourth-grade teacher, Lara Ramsey answers students' questions as they finish work on the painting. At the right, students count cash generated by the raffle of the painting.
