FINANCIAL AID POLICIES

Applicants who are determined by Student Financial Services to need assistance in meeting educational expenses, and who submit all required documents and information by the published deadlines, will be eligible for Smith’s need-based financial aid. Aid and admission decisions are mailed at the same time.

If you do not complete your financial aid application by the published deadlines, prior to admission to Smith, you will not be eligible to apply for institutional aid until you have completed 32 credits at Smith. You will still be eligible to apply for federal loans, Federal Pell grants, state grants and some campus jobs. Please note that this policy does not apply to students who applied for but were denied financial aid prior to admission to Smith.

International applicants who do not apply for aid prior to admission to Smith, you will not be eligible to apply for institution-by-the-published-deadlines, prior to admission to Smith.

If you do not complete your financial aid application after the priority deadline will receive notification as soon as possible once all financial aid requirements are complete.

INSTRUCTIONS

The Office of Student Financial Services is dedicated to working with all students during the application process and throughout their time at Smith to help them finance their education at Smith. It is crucial that applicants complete all forms in a timely manner; late applications jeopardize awards. Please keep a copy of all documents submitted.

In completing the required forms, use the most accurate figures available to you. Estimate carefully if you do not have full information to be able to meet deadlines. Your financial aid application will not be considered until all requested documents and information have been received. Be sure to call Student Financial Services if you have an unavoidable delay or if there is a drastic change in your financial circumstances.

The budget year used for Ada Comstock students covers nine months, from September 1 through May 31. Expenses are for tuition, fees, books, supplies, commuting costs and child care if needed. Expenses will vary according to the size of your household and the number of credits for which you enroll. Full-time study for an Ada Comstock student is a minimum of 12 credits each semester, and you must be enrolled in at least eight credits per semester to be eligible for institutional financial aid. College grant aid cannot exceed college-billed fees.

In addition to billed fees, you will need to cover the cost of books and supplies, personal expenses, travel and optional items such as phone service. The costs of books will vary with the courses you take and the availability of secondhand books, but you should plan to spend at least $100 per four-credit course.

An education at Smith College is expensive but affordable for any woman willing to make an investment in her future through planning, borrowing, jobs and some financial sacrifice.

Smith Is Affordable
Our need-based aid program operates with a personalized assessment of each applicant’s ability to pay for college expenses, based on information provided by the applicant and documented by tax returns and other records. Smith College is committed to a financial aid policy that meets the full documented financial need for educational costs, as calculated by the college. Financial aid packages are individualized; most contain grant, loan and a work-study job. Most Ada Comstock Scholars find they must borrow additional funds from federal and other sources to cover living expenses for themselves and dependents.

Cost of Attendance
Each Ada Comstock Scholar’s costs are based on the projected number of credits in which she enrolls, her housing choice, educationally related expenses (books and supplies), and standard allowances for personal living expenses and travel. Students are required to enroll in at least 8 credits a semester to receive institutional financial aid. Ada Comstock Scholars are considered full-time if enrolled in 12 credits or more. Students living in campus housing must enroll in at least 12 credits.

Documented Need
Smith calculates how much you are expected to contribute to your education. Your documented need is the difference between the cost of attendance and your expected contribution. Your documented need is met with loans, grants and work-study. The standard subsidized federal loan amount per year is $5,500, regardless of the credit load taken. Additional unsubsidized federal loans may also be available. Grants are scholarships given to the student from college sources, including gifts from alumnae, friends, and federal and state agencies.

Get Organized
Keeping all forms organized in one place helps. Start collecting information about your income and expenses and file your taxes as early as you can after January 1. Remember to note and meet all deadline dates and keep a copy of everything submitted. Include details about personal or financial circumstances that affect your ability to finance your education at Smith.

Develop Your Financial Plan
Prepare a budget of your income and expenses, including housing, groceries, car payments and insurance, credit card payments, debt maintenance, medical costs, Internet access and entertainment costs. Project how your expenses will change if you attend Smith. Try to eliminate all consumer debt before enrollment. Find out about outside scholarships. Finally, consider the most advantageous timing of your transfer to Smith from a financial point of view.

Help Along the Way
The Student Financial Services office is available to assist you. Contact us by phone or e-mail and check our Web site. After you submit your application, you will be given a PIN to track the status of your financial aid application online.
