

08-336c Cultivating Curiosity in the Clinical Inquiry —6 Hour Seminar

Anton Hart, Ph.D.

Saturday, July 19, 2008 9:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m.

Learning Objectives

1. Conceptualize curiosity and its impediments as a vital way of understanding psychopathology and its treatment in the process of psychodynamic psychotherapy.
2. Enhancing participants' sense of possibility regarding how they may cultivate curiosity in their clinical work.

Bibliography

- Hart, A. H. (1999). Reclaiming the analyst's disruptive role. Contemporary Psychoanalysis, 35(2), 185-211.
- Levenson, E. A. (1991). The Purloined Self: Interpersonal Perspective in Psychoanalysis. New York: Contemporary Psychoanalysis Books
- Ogden, T. H. (1994). Subjects of analysis. Northvale, NJ: Jason Aronson.