REQUIREMENTS

1. You are expected to attend class regularly, finish the assigned readings on time, and participate in class discussions actively (and, one hopes, enthusiastically).
2. To facilitate class discussion, you will be expected to make regular postings on Moodle, responding to the readings directly as well as to the postings of other students. I expect you to post 250+ words each week. Your postings should demonstrate a thoughtful and rigorous engagement with the material. Creativity is encouraged, rambling is not. Although you are welcome to focus on a particular article or passage within a week's assignment, you should try to contextualize that material within the rest of the week's readings. Postings for each week should be submitted by Saturday at midnight of that week. In short, postings made during a particular week should be posted in the folder for that week. At the end of the semester, you will be expected to print out all of your posts and submit them to me. These are due on the last day of classes.
3. Class participation will constitute a significant portion of your grade. Hence, read the material, post your reactions and insights, and come to class prepared to engage in a high level discussion of the material. Keep in mind Wittgenstein's aphorism, "Even to have expressed a false thought boldly and clearly is already to have gained a great deal." To this end, students will be asked to introduce the readings for each class.
4. A 10-page research paper will be due at the end of the semester (May 8th). Research topics must be submitted to me for approval, and then they should be posted. Many of you will have overlapping projects, and it would be good for you to work collaboratively. During the last week of the semester, you will be expected to present your research as a work in progress.

In summary, your grade will be determined by the quality of your participation in class, your postings on Moodle, and your research paper.
